

School of Education, Human Performance, and Health

M.Ed. in Applied Learning and Instruction

Program Goals	Student Learning Outcomes
1. Students demonstrate knowledge of the field of study and scholarship.	1.1 Graduate students demonstrate foundational theoretical and content knowledge in the field.
2. Students demonstrate research and methodological skills relevant to the field.	2.1 Graduate students demonstrate the ability to read, analyze and evaluate peer-reviewed research.
	2.2 Graduate students demonstrate the ability to understand and use basic quantitative and qualitative research methods.
	2.2 Graduate students demonstrate the ability to identify a problem in educational practice, and review, analyze, and synthesize peer-reviewed literature.
3. Students demonstrate professional communication and collaborative skills.	3.1 Graduate students will be able to work in a collaborative professional environment and communicate effectively.
4. Students demonstrate the ability to design and implement research, collect data, analyze data, and present findings.	4.1 Graduate students demonstrate competence in designing and conducting applied research using accepted professional methodologies.
	4.2 Graduate students demonstrate the ability to effectively present research findings in a professional environment.